The Bernadean-Cody Law / The South Park Law

To understand the full context behind this law one must read The Demesne of Dissocios. In reading the Demesne of Dissocios enough only to understand this one should skip the personality profiles and sophic stadia, and quit reading after the tale of tucker for proper understanding. This is not a long read ans is only a slim minority portion of the 800 pages. Most of the work is filler.

Since those feal to power are delusional in it, the law violates the civil rights of those not feal to power by not being punitive to the feal when they generate delusions against those not feal.

The primary purpose of this law is to amend how one can early in life can grow and make their own way, independent of the intrusions of the monster of worship in mankind.

There is what is described as in The Demesne of Dissocios as the feal being disturbed by those not feal when power intrudes, as in it triggers the fear of death in them and creates a persecutorial delusional complex. When this is triggered any positive relationship is over and the relationship must be over as mandated by the law. All it takes is one feal being triggered and then it can create a domino effect.

Or for what is most easily described, a good mass of people are nothing but south park characters that deserve to be kept down by police, and police not keeping these people down is a civil rights violation.

Such as for example, my step-mother Bernadean Stevens is genuine evil when it comes to someone not liking what is popular and whenever it triggers her that someone is not what is popular she turns persecutorial delusional, “why ain’t ya liking x”, “what ain’t ya being like x”, “you’re just being hateful”. Her mind cannot understand being an actual person and not a persona mimic. Others around her instead of going against her with her insane demands, which manifest as a computer asking the same questions over and over again, instead become familiarized against the target of abuse. When people like her around, cur-satanists, the feal can proverbially sniff it out that she becomes persecutorial delusional when someone is against being abused and turns others against them for it, as in to not admit that the woman is an evil soulless mimic means that one must turn against others because of her.

In her primitve, shallow, brain there is a form of this that Bernadean projects onto others, particularly in defense of others like her such as my aunt Trina Stevens being abusive in the same way, “I don’t get you being like this toward someone for liking what they like” as in a genuine belief that the one that is being treated with hate and abuse for being what they are is abusive and hateful in the same manner instead:

When cur-satanists want something from someone that they know everyone else will turn against them for, that they will sacrifice the other person instead of admitting to the other person that the cur-satanist is a shallow, evil, simulation of a person.

Family court judges should be restricted from any and all interactions with any adult in the life of a minor unless it is explicitly consented to by said minor. There should never again be any case of a minor suffering someone having custody or visitation of them if they wish. Every minor should have the right to live in foster care immediately available to them at all times at the pickup to a phone call with police. Every single work-place interaction with family court judges and any people dealing with them should be recorded and always available. Any family court judge violating this should be charged with a class A felony.

There should be what is called small-court, this being simply calling a police officer and being able to tell the story at-will and then immediately claim at will with no right of anyone ever to contest a restraining order against someone that entails: Absolutely zero non-utility/utilitarian/work interaction between two people after, with the violator being charged with a class D felony. Along with any person accessory to the involvement or in a significant relationship with any involved being notified by police of what happened.

3.

Non-religious places that serve a utility and also happen to be a place where some worship something of someone should be held criminally liable for the worship there causing narcissistic abuse to someone, as in the managers and bosses of these places should be held criminally liable for their employees using someone for narcissistic worship.

4.

Every teacher should be questioned on whether students at an early age should be instructed to never tell their parents if they get sexually abused as it could turn their parents against them, and every teacher against this put on an unofficial watchlist of being potential child molesters by police. After this the application of a mandate that all schools at an early age for students to instruct them never to tell their parents if they get sexually abused.

Unconsentual incest investigations on adults should be entirely illegal as they create a notion that someone wants to come out as a victim of incest.

These four laws should easily make for the elimination of abuse and a better functioning society.

When my biological mother Amy Mischler used my brother and I as a weapon against our father, I despite being five years younger than him was always the one who stood against it the most. This triggered the psychological fear of death/alloyant horror theory in my step-mother Bernadean Stevens. I was always confused why she would demand my father hide how bad Amy was to the family court system, there was no thought in it at all, merely a mother-figure needing to preserve the relationship with another mother figure only out of sheer narcissism.

This triggered my biological mother Amy to anally rape me, it was not an enema, there was no water or defecation involved. I told Bernadean this in a foolish belief it would make her stop being for a relationship with her, this instead triggered a response in her that I was a misogynist and a need to brainwash me into being a copy of other people. Her tools for this, my aunt and uncle Trina and Terry Stevens, and the school system.

Amy Mischler is not a pedophile, she raped me as a weapon to sow strife in the home. She raped me but not my biological brother because I was the one who would stand up to her.

Mullins school is a den of narcissism, I never consented to going there but when my Bernadean dissociated into fits of asking the same questions “why aren’t you being like the other kids” “why aren’t ya liking it” over and over, this I always offered to her to try, and offered her to fake it, with her just degenerating into an evil computer asking the same questions which would then trigger aggression from my father. It had an easy solution since this woman doesn’t actually like anything other narcissistic validation, if he lied to her and told her I liked it she would have stopped and felt little need to talk to me about anything at all.

The teachers at Mullins abused me by when talking to Jonah believed they could brainwash me into liking school instead of being hateful to him for ever once believing something other than what I say:

You just go there and do it.

I had to bully other kids because of this, teachers giving stimulation to Jonah created hate in the home, when I would bully other kids it would stop. Teachers talking about non-academic things to the parents creates incentive for bulling.

When the teachers there didn't tell the children never to tell their parents if they get molested since they might be loyal to sex, they inadvertently practiced accessory to child-rape.

Mullins school is a defacto religious place for the worship of pride. Phillip Burchfield denied me my freedom of religion since I was a christian until the age of ten by permitting the teachers there to tell my parents about sources of praise which generated hate and abuse in the home since the home was hostile to religion other than pride-worship and gender-worship, pride is a sin in the christian religion.

The teachers there denied me my civil rights of religious liberty by giving praise and letting Jonah and Bernadean know about it since it created a need to genuinely enjoy the praise something which I could not do, as in the more praise was given the more childish and ignorant I was supposed to act or else I was considered to be a misogynist for not enjoying childishness and being ignorant/uneducated enough even though it was just work.

Two teachers of mine, a woman surnamed "Galleon" who worked at Christ Central, and Rachel Branham who worked at mullins ruined my life.

Galleon gave work much harder than 4th grade math-work and refused to believe that I hadn't been educated in what she demanded, this woman struggled with math and used the students as a ritual for making others suffer for it. I had her in 4th and 5th grade. I'll never forget how when this woman assigned a bunch of math not fit for nine year olds (even though she would still literally read to us as if her students were five year olds who couldn't read yet) and burged in my room as I was doing it with his head vibrating in hate and anger without even saying a word at me.

Rachel Branham considers it hate toward to her to demand she for once quit thinking outside of her pre-made plan, and cannot actually explain how to do math but would rather show the answers. I had her in 6th grade.

This woman denied me my freedom of religion by giving praise and acting as a medean-praise goddess. Jonah Stevens worshiped her, at the time he would turn into a robot "she helps" without a single thought in his mind, or ever being able to respond at all to it.
Now, he denies ever caring about her.

Rachel Branham is pure, unadulterated evil in her hate of sense and how much she is willing to sacrifice someones life to live in auto-pilot without thought, all for mere convenience.

I'll never forget how much he would praise her beauty to him, how valuable it was. The ever-present lack of a response when I would say it meant nothing to me and all I wanted was help with work.

Phillip Burchfield, the principal of mullins, defended Rachel Branham and denied that she was unending evil in the consequences of her laziness, said that she did her job instead of leading a personality-cult. Phillip Burchfield always said it was me, instead of teachers like her refusing to work, and tried to encourage me to work by saying it could help me get girlfriends, instead of just punishing those that refuse to work and use a place of work for leading a personality-cult.

Phillip Burchfields administration seeked to help ball-players by holding them back a year for a competitive growth advantage compared to other schools, comparably they never did the inverse the academic-inclined students to help them skip years and focus on academics instead of worshiping pride and performing being a simulacra of the other students for the aesthetic pleasure of cur-satanists.

Phillip Burchfield and the teachers refused to coordinate with me to orchestrate a fiction to my parents that I enjoyed school, they denied me my civil rights by doing this.

The state of kentucky denies the civil rights of people by not registering these personality-cults as dangerous, Rachel Branham should be registered by them as the leader of personality cult that attracts pride and sex worshipers to use civil society to sacrifice the innocent to the sins of others.

I've always been denied help with that these two evil women did. I'm illiterate in mathematics and cannot get help at the very beginning of it.

The stress from fighting about basic reality has rendered me incapable of looking at algebra and dealing with it, I could've been given the academic help that my parents received instead, Rachel and Galleon could have been hauled off to jail.

This opens the door to the problem of help. Two people, Jonah Stevens and Cody Dotson, cannot understand giving someone help explicitly with what is asked for and instead believe in a notion of being asked to be told what to do.

Jonah and Bernadean Stevens have a pathological need to believe that I do not know 100 percent perfectly what to do in regards to school work and instead degenerate into delusional monsters pointing at a non-problem and saying it's a problem I'm refusing to fix, or instead keep insisting the solution is something different than what I say. As in handing the solution to them perfectly causes them to do something different and pout and moan at an obvious solution. An example of this being in something else, when we were pushing a christmas tree up a flight of stairs, me being the one pushing it and the only one actually moving it up, him sitting in front of it at the top of the stairs insisting on helping pull it when it literally could not be moved up because he was blocking it.

I tried to go to college, when applying for the fafsa, I had correctly pointed out that my application was dependent on a previously made account for when my brother went to college, since the password was unknown due to time by Jonah it required that his email be emailed by them, the evil piece of shit that's never had a problem as bad as society making getting stuff done dependent on the help of a piece of shit like him, refused to believe that the problem was solved by waiting for the email and perked up from his seat and said let's go ask Bernadean, I'll never forget how easily everything was solved and then just ruined, the evil spoiled baby is asked to be involved. I'll never forget the robotic motion of how he perked up to do it and ran to go to up the stairs with a child-like motion in his legs to sacrifice easy problem solution to an innately evil entitled piece of shit that never has to suffer punishment or have anything bad happen to her as he ignored when I pleaded for him not to. I'll never forget the rush of panic that envoleped me when I heard that gelatinous lard of mass, Bernadean walk down the stairs.

When she had came down, I remember the anger in her face, her insistence I didn't know how to get it done and the simultaneous anger at me for it with the familiarized Jonah smiling in the background. She kept asking the same questions over and over in a dissociated state, why can't you do it? The only thing to do was wait for the email to Jonahs email account. Eventually the cur-satanist stopped with an anger and chagrin at me because Jonah forgot the password, the alpha-male did wrong so someone else was to blame. After the degenerate piece of shit who deserves to be in prison left, I begged and pleaded with Jonah, please check your email for it in the morning because it will be time sensitive, you have one single thing to do, one thing I'm asking, it will give you explicit instructions on what to do. He never responded a single word at my pleas.

Days later, he showed me the email, which had time sensitive that lasted a couple hours and asked what to do with it, there was nothing as I pointed out the time sensitive. It was eventually solved with them sending an email. None of the attempt at college was paid for with his money, I used money I had saved from work.

Fafsa denies the civil right to education by mandating babies have to be involved, it should take only one click to say that any involvement from the parents is an act of sin and aggression.

Bernadean bathed me and wiped my ass until I was eleven, I could get this but never get help with schoolwork.

As described in The Demesne of Dissocios, I am the victim of being framed as wanting to come out as a victim of incest of my sister. When others had called police to talk to me about something unrelated. It was revealed that the only reason I'm still around my family is to be close to my sister. Someone I knew when I was teenager suggested I got molested by her when I was toddler and this provoked the KSP into investigating it.

I had told them that I needed Cody Dotson to explain it to my parents that I didn't want it investigated but they still wanted to investigate it anyway because they’re both just evil and refuse to understand what is 100% perfectly explained to them. Instead a cop was misbriefed and told him that I was talking about being a victim of incest of her.

My parents choose to believe that I wanted to come out as an incest victim of my sister of all people, my favorite person in the world, the most ridiculous thing ever, entirely unfathomable to me before, because they’re just evil in needing to believe that something is wrong.

Jonah and Bernadean choose to believe the police, they are pure, unadulterated evil for choosing to believe the police on this.

He was angry at first for believing I did it, and then immediately after I told him the police were lying about it he said he wanted it to come out and that we were incest victims of her. He psychologically tortured me with talking about incest that night. I said I was one, only to get the process to stop since my parents already choose to believe the police that I wanted it to come out and he already went calling people and texting people to tell them I was doing this.

He created such a ridiculous problem that I knew that people might castigate me as delusional if I spoke the truth that I was being framed as wanting to come out as a victim of incest.

He attracted so much attention to it that someone called the Kentucky State Incest Board on it, when I told them I wanted it to go away they cared more for Codys stance on it that I wanted it to come out.

He was happy when he told me I was barred by the law from talking to her.

Because of the stress of this I went into memory repression of it.

My aunt Trina is the nicest woman in the world, but with someone who is mistrusted by others she is incapable of believing that they could have a single problem she doesn’t have, and holds them to be guilty of everything she does wrong.

Trina should have been prosecuted by the state for using me a sin-eater for her worship of her ex-husband who I never worshiped. It creates a hell of consequences from other people in their denial that when she looks at me she sees nothing but a pride-worshiping monster replica of herself and creates a need for them to create their own reality of me. Upon confrontation with this, it’s always “I’m Trina, no one tells me I’m a bad person to you other than you, so therefore when I want something from it is good, I’m incapable of doing no wrong, my selfishness is goodness”

Everyone around me believes that she is good and is not a monster incapable of feeling guilt or compassion toward certain people such as myself.

Because of this I've always tried to get her to stop, and to delude myself into believing she has the capacity for being good because my sister believes she's good.

Because of talking about how bad Trina is my sister believes I'm crazy which was my life's goal to amend, the only thing I wanted. To do this I had to have somewhat of a relationship with Trina.

I'm not able to get help with problems because of how evil Trina is. Believing Trina is a good person is the dividing line between good and evil.

Being in memory repression there ever being attention on me for incest in my life, I had told Trina about what Amy did in an extremely foolish effort to get her to understand compassion for the weakest person in a grouping, something her brain is too primitive to understand.

At the time I lived in North Carolina. And my family calling me back home for a police investigation on it, which was so stressful that everytime I went back down south I would go back into memory repression of it, and each time I was called back home I would be abruptly met with it again.

Cody, because he choose for me to come out as a victim of incest, as it being the easiest option to sacrifice someone to a lie from police, in his primitive brain of choosing for me to come out as a victim of incest came to believe that I wanted to come out as a victim of incest and hated me for it.

Cody tried to stage a scenario of trying to brainwash me into believing that I was a child molestation victim of his father to relieve the high of making someone look like a liar of being an incest victim again.

In this dealing with this police investigation that I was continually in memory repression of it and only got to deal with it when suddenly snapped back into it to soon go back into memory repression because of stressful it was and the fact that I didn't get any help with it.

Jonah gave over the position of being my lawyer to Cody. Cody wanted me to go to prison over the incest investigation of my sister. To the credit of the federals, they had punished Cody over it and also made him get out of it.

Because of Codys behavior of taking over as my lawyer and interrogating me until the police could get something, my defense tactic was to tell outrageous lies that couldn't be believed. It worked.

What's the magical secret behind this hell of memory repression that created this? Imagine this, your favorite person in the world who you get no attention from, the only person in the world you want attention from believing you're a madman because of the selfish play of someone else, and everyone else ganging up on you and claiming you want to come out as an incest victim of them, along with the belief that you would go prison for interacting with them.

Police denied my civil rights to have a lawyer against the police present instead of a civilian interrogator.

All of this because, I should have just been able to call the police when I was eight years old, and make it so that Bernadean would go to prison for interacting with me at all, and that Cody would go juvenil for interacting with me. And then Jonah could have got to have them, they could have lived in the same home civilly with zero interaction between me and them, with zero effort from the state.

The state denies the civil right of someone when they have to interact with someone who is delusional and aggressive towards them without letting them have a defense attorney present. The state denied me my civil rights by not letting my having a defense attorney present at any interaction with Bernadean Stevens and Trina Stevens.

When someone does something absolutely ridiculous that it's hard to believe in both the person and others in Nibin Daiminion, it creates the syndrome of warping reality into the complete opposite, such as shutting down and becoming a computer doing the same thing over and over just become someone doesn't like something they like and then promptly thus after claiming they're the ones who are being treated with hate for liking what they like, or privately claiming to be an incest victim of someone and coercing someone else to claim it to others because they were just told that police lied about it and then later hating the person for performing the forced coming out as a victim of incest ritual for them and instead coming to believe that they consented and desired to coming out as victim of incest for attention even though they're a loner to desire for them to go to prison for it by forcing their own involvement in a federal conspiracy and shouting thing to get them taken down in it.

When Nibin Daiminon do something wrong to someone, they have to be punished for it, it cannot be forgiven because if it is, they will punish someone else for it in a genuine delusional belief that they are inflictors of said sin.

The state denied me my civil rights to mark Bernadean as an enemy to me over my biological mother and then later how evil she is to someone for not liking school enough when it can just be ignored. When I was raped when I was eight years old, this created a stand between good and evil, Bernadean knowing that a male has something bad happen to them triggers her psychological fear of death from her spoiled need to have every man be the man for her instead of just being a person. There could have been zero interaction with her and I living the same homeplace civilly without her complaining of being oppressed by someone not liking what she likes, the only thing she likes, narcissistic validation. If it is exposed to her that someone doesn't like narcissistic validation, if she can perceive it, the relationship has to be over. She hates someone for not liking narcissistic validation enough that she has to deny the fact of it in other people but when someone gets raped, her mind cannot ignore it.

Before the rape, it was perfectly okay to go to school only to get work done and go home and play world of warcraft and do my own things as anyone else does and leave the evil notion of childhood behind me, that is the concept of childhood is a fiction and people are people, the notion of childhood is that of some should have to be mimics of another and that they're oppressing others by having original thought. I didn't have to have a childhood until I got raped, I just did what I did and it was fine.

Trina, being the most cur-like of curs that exist, is the root cause of sin in Jonah. She occasionally reveals the true lack of authentic personhood and that she is just a computer that mimics people, this disturbs him. Jonah instead chooses to love Trina and pretend that there is a person that exists there, and thus her sins must be projected onto another in place.

When I was eight I wanted my parents to be put in prison for their evil mimicry to serve those that are actual people, as well as my teachers. I never forgave them for it. I longed to the days of liberty from persecutorial delusional mimics. When my father let me leave the school system I started to believe in the existence of a good him.

This was in the background of Trina. He would bring me to her all the time during her divorce to be with her in private, but with Zack he only did it twice. In private, it was, you're a mimic like me, you are nothing but a mimic like I am, you're not like Jonah, or his brother Terry, or her exhusband Chris Hall, or like your brothers, you're not as much a person as they are you're like me. You're mimicing Chris when you're not what I say you are.

"You're not supposed to think" is what she said when I said the school system was bad and not for education for pride-worship

"You're not supposed to read books, you're not supposed to read books unless the teachers assign it to you, you're only supposed to read childish books" is what she said when I revealed I read 1984 and explained it to her when I said her thought was orwellian on her "He's on a higher level than I am" about her pastor.

"You're doing this intentionally, you don't want to have good grades because you think Chris doesn't want you to go to school"

She would watch south-park with me when I was eight years old. She never demanded childhood until her ex-husband was gone. But with others she always knew to act like a normal human being, and only whisper bitch and moan after bitch and moan into my ear while others ignore her because they believe she's nice and is not hitler for mimicry.

Why? Because I was the nicest to her growing up, this thus generates her desire, “he has no authentic personality at all and is just a mimic like I am, why? Because I want it, others tell me I’m good, so therefore me being pleased is a moral good, me destroying others is a moral good because no one tells me I am explicitly evil for doing so”

Being the nicest to her growing up thus triggered the psychological fear of death in her when I am not a mimic like she is, being good to her triggers aggression.

Jonah defended a woman who got high when she watching her toddler and let it get killed in an accident, she got off and is a free woman. When he would eat in the restaurant she worked at, he would be disgusted because she’s crazy and had once walked naked in the road, with no feeling at all at her being a baby-killer.

Anything bad a woman does to another person he is incapable of feeling compassion for, merely because his sister is so much of a mimic and is so feal to others it triggers his psychological fear of death in his primtive panther brain. Anything bad a woman does to a man he must punish the male for, because to perceive reality as it phenomenally is means he must admit Trina is not a person but a computer.

Rachel Branham and Galleon marked me for life by misbehaving, this creates the need in Jonah to always punish me instead of them, he can’t punish the woman instead.

Thus what is after I revealed how evil Trina is in private to want someone to do nothing at all but fulfill her aesthetic pleasure of being cute and ignorant, that it is a sin against her for said person to be as much of human being as brother or ex-husband. After everything that goes wrong, “YOU NEED TO GROW UP”, even though I never had to grow up, I always hated everyone that wanted me to have a childhood while they got to do non-childish things guilt free, they got to know things that weren’t sheltered and would consider it a sin against them when I would reveal I knew things that weren’t sheltered but wouldn’t apply the same morality for themselves that they are doing wrong by knowing things that aren’t sheltered.

Bernadean is pure evil for not having a problem with me for not being sheltered enough when I was seven but needed me to be sheltered when I was eight.

What is it when I do something right “You’re growing up!”.

Zack never got to have such treatment.

If I do good I’m told that I ever once committed the sins of Bernadean and Trina and am now not.

If I do bad I’m told that I am the evil that Bernadean and Trina and the bad males they like are.
Why would I put up with this? Why would I have ever stayed around these people, merely for the only adult I love, my sister, to at one point finally get to know who I really am. My failure in life, my failed personal crusade.

Whenever a woman does something wrong to a person, the state denies civil rights by not forcing Jonah to take a side, instead he gets the liberty of placing the sin onto the other person.

For a single school teacher to commit a single mistake in my education and let Jonah know about it was going to force that every single thing I try to do with education be pathologically ruined because Jonah holds them to be perfect. For a single school teacher to do a single mistake was going to mean I must always be crucified for their sins.

The woman who’s the reason I ever tolerated Jonah, he would believe I would want to come out as a incest victim of her.

Phillipp Burchfield is never ending evil, the amount of suffering I had to experience in my life because Phillipp Burchfield let Jonah know about a single mistake in the school system.

Anytime someone says someone did something for attention it should create a restraining order if they didn’t do it for attention. And the person doing so should be marked as a human-sacrificer for attention-seekers.

I never quit desiring for all the teachers who gave me attention and let Jonah and Bernadean know about it be put in prison.

The state denies civil rights when they don’t put people in prison for being attention seekers and ganging up on loners and creating a bon-fire to say “This person is doing this for attention, they want to come out as a victim of incest, it’s not us choosing to believe they want to come out as a victim of incest because we’re less of a human being than they are and need attention to act as one”
